Barbara Spies, 66, former CIA editor

Barbara L. Spies, 66, a former editor for the Central Intelligence Agency, died of cancer Monday at her home in Kensington.

Miss Spies was born in Pelham, N.Y., and graduated from the College of New Rochelle. She moved to Washington in 1943 when she joined the WAVES, the female branch of the United States Navy. She joined the CIA when it was formed in 1947 and retired in 1971.

Miss Spies was a member of Holy Redeemer Catholic Church in Kensington and the American Association of University Women.

She leaves no immediate survivors.

A memorial Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. today at Holy Redeemer Catholic Church, 9705 Summit Ave., Kensington. Burial will be private.

It was requested that expressions of sympathy be in the form of contributions to the Montgomery Hospice Society, 6701 Wisconsin Ave., Chevy Chase.
